Letter From Texas.

KERRVILLE, Texas, May, 1902. EDITOR RECORD:-While lying in my tent I thought I would write to you a few lines about my trip, and also the country that I have passed through.

I took the morning train for Chicago March 26th, a very sick man. It was damp there and I put in a bad night, On the 27th I left Chicago at 10:30 p.m. arriving at Kansas City on the 28th. arrived at Albuquerque on the 29th but found the altitude too high. In coming over the Glorietta mountains I nearly gave up, but there were three ladies who saw my distress and they bathed my head and face to help me out. I landed in El Paso on the 31st, 250 miles south. This is a very nice city but there are too many Mexicans. It was once a Mexi-C E. Scott will lecture before the can town and they live there still. The but no water. It divides Texas from Old Mexico. It is only one-half mile across to Janrez (pronounced Warrez) They have a bull fight there nearly every Sunday The Sunday before I came away there was a fight between a bull and a mountain lion, but the lion was too tame and would not put up much of a serap. The alkali water and sand storms there are terrible and I left Miss Helen Henry, '02, University of the desert after two weeks' experience, miles from El Paso, I had lost five ibs. but I landed in the cotton country with Wallace Webber came near losing one a light heart. I hope to live to pick a few balls of cotton with my own hands to send to you. I must say the southern people are the finest and most friendly lot of beings in the world, and it is a beautiful country here. This town is about 1800 feet above the level, but I expect to move up the river to a higher elevation in a few days. We can get any altitude we require within a radius of 20 miles. I will close for this time, with regards to the people of Alma.
